"WAR"

A SERIAL STORY BY

BARONESS BERTHA VON TUITTER

Canadian rights controlled by British and Colonial Press, Limited, Toronto and getting away," said Conrad, seeing Tilling approach, took the hint, and laughingly flew off.

"This Althaus again," said Tilling, coming up to my side, his tone being plainly vexed. "He pleased me."

"Did he leave at seeing me, or did his horse run away?"

"He went because I sent him." "Countess Martha, the world says he loves his cousin."

"That he courts her persistently." "And not without hope."

"Tilling was silent, and I laughed into his face. But I am not the cousin. It is my sister Lilli."

"You lift a load from my heart. I had expected my cousin, and I wished to leave Vienna."

"I could not stay and look on. Besides, I dared not trust myself, for I could no longer content my feelings for you, and I feared being made ridiculous and miserable."

"To-day you are happy."

"Since yesterday I scarcely know myself, and yet I feared I should suddenly awake and find it all a dream."

"To-day I am in the seventh heaven and to-morrow, perhaps, in despair. For now, I am usually cool and quiet, but today my feelings are extravagant. You can make me either happy or wretched."

"I have doubts, too. There is that princess."

"Has that nonsense come to your ears? There is nothing in it, or I would be wishing to leave Vienna."

"A stupid jealousy in us both. Would I have asked you to meet me if I had wished to leave Vienna?"

"I added, 'Yet why have you kept away from me?'"

"Because I never dared hope that I could win your love. It was not till you ordered me in the memory of my mother, that I dared speak, though was eager to dedicate my life to you."

"So I have really thrown myself at your feet, or you would not have bothered about my mother's Mails."

"I did not care to be counted with the swarm of admirers."

"Oh, they do not count. They only wanted a widow."

"That is the very point which held me back, for I have no fortune. I would rather be miserable all my days than suspected by the world and the woman I loved of having had a low motive in marrying her."

"You proud, noble fellow, I could never believe, no never, that a thing wrong motive was possible to you."

"And we rode on and questioned each other about all our ideas and feelings. It was a blissful hour."

Direct from Vienna I drove to my father's house. It was an all pleasant sensation the announcement would make, and I wished it over as soon as possible.

Marie was busy over their morning papers, and both were astonished at my early call, and in a riding habit.

"I have been riding to the Prater, and something happened which you must all know at once. I have promised to marry her."

"You happy fellow, throw up your hands, and father frowned—"I can only hope—"

"I had promised to marry the man that I love, and who will surely make me happy—Baron Frederick von Tilling."

"How dare you, after what I said yesterday," shouted my father, springing up.

"Aunt Marie shook her head: 'I had rather it were some else. He is not a match for you, and has such peculiar views.'"

"Our views are alike, and I scorn to look out for any match. Father, dearest father, do not frown so darkly, do not spoil my happiness with your displeasure; be my dear good papa."

"But, child," said my father, softening, "I only want your happiness. I could not be happy with a soldier who is not a soldier from his heart and soul."

"But you do not need to marry him," remarked Aunt Marie judiciously. "His soldier notions are of little consequence. But I would be unhappy with a man who speaks with so little reverence of the Bible and God as he did the other day."

"You too, my dear Aunt, need not marry him," I interposed laughingly. "We have not time to quarrel at all, and I certainly desire it, but I fear he will not."

"To think," said Aunt Marie, "that you have refused a Prince! and now you are descending in the social scale instead."

"Here I come," I said, "for the first time since Anna's death, to tell you I am happy, and instead of being glad you both drag out reasons for reproach—military service, Jehovah, social scale and suchlike."

But after half an hour's conversation the old folks were somewhat reconciled, and my father agreed to come in the evening to meet his future son-in-law at my house.

All the relatives came at the same time, and I introduced Tilling as my betrothed. Rosa and Lilli were delighted. Conrad cried: "Bravo, Martha, Lilli should give you a kiss as ample." My father had conquered his antipathy, or succeeded in concealing it, and Aunt Marie was even full of sentiment. Little Rudolf presented to his "new papa," who kissing, said: "Of you, my little fellow, we two must try to make a good thing of it."

During the evening my father suggested his idea that Tilling would let the services. The latter answered in a hesitating way:

"Give up my career, when I have no other? One can dislike war and still—"

"Yes, I know—as you said lately, a German need not love to see a house on fire."

"There are other illustrations: Need a physician love cancer or typhus, or a judge enjoy burglary and murder? But what reason could I have for abating my profession?"

"You would spare your wife the unpleasant life of the garcon," said Aunt Marie, "and spare her the heartache that would otherwise be hers."

"Those are good reasons, and I shall try to keep my wife from as many unpleasantnesses as possible. But would it not be most unpleasant to have a husband without a calling? If I resigned, it would count for lastness or cowardice. It did not occur to me, nor to you either, Martha, I hope."

"Suppose I made it a condition?" "You would not do that. I should prefer to renounce my happiness. You are rich, I am poor, except for my pay and the hope of promotion. These I cannot surrender without loss of my dignity and honor."

"Bravo, my son, now I am reconciled. It would be a shame, for you will certainly rise to the rank of general—may be a governor or minister of war some day. Your wife may have a proud position."

"The prospect of being a commander's wife had no charms for me. I have retired to one of our estates, yet I approved of Frederick's resolution since it reconciled my father."

"Yes, quite reconciled," continued my father, "for the daughter of a soldier, the widow of a soldier could never find satisfaction with a civilian's costume for always."

Frederick's glance said, "I know you better," but aloud he remarked, with a smile, "You may be the only love with my uniform."

In September we were married. My husband had two months' leave, and we spent a week in Berlin, visiting the sister of Frederick's mother. The two sisters had greatly resembled each other, and I was able to realize the beauty of character of the one from the other. Frau Cornelia von Tilling was the mother of an only son, just about to become a lieutenant, and a touching affection existed between them, such as I had never seen and I might experience some day.

Our wedding tour, extending to the Rhine and to Switzerland, brought many happy hours: revelations, and discovered also that he was a perfect master of the French and English languages. Our two months' honeymoon was a revelation to me, and I discovered also that he was a perfect master of the French and English languages. Our two months' honeymoon was a revelation to me, and I discovered also that he was a perfect master of the French and English languages.

"We will have to wait a long time for that day," my father broke in. "That will be an aristocracy exists—"

"That will be for ever," muttered the Doctor.

"Oh, so you would abolish aristocracy?"

"Yes, the feudal. The future needs no nobility."

"But so much the more will it need noble men," said Frederick in confirmation.

"And this rare race will quietly take a slap in the face?"

"That will be none to offer the insult."

"And the states will not defend themselves, if attacked by a neighbor?"

"No neighboring state will offer an attack, as even now our neighboring countries do not so behave each other, as noblemen no longer need troops for his castle."

"So some day the states will disappear, and the wing armies will then become of my Heutenants-colonels?"

"What has become of the squire of feudal times?"

Three Turkish Forts In Dardanelles Silenced By Allied Fleets

Bombardment Carried On By Nine Ships Which Advance Two Miles Up Straits—Mist Prevails and It Is Impossible to Ascertain Extent of Damage Done—Turkish Garrisons Are Subjected to Fire of Allies on Both Sides

LONDON, March 3.—With the Allied fleet again bombarding the Dardanelles, and the Russians pushing their offensive in the Caucasus, the war end is again coming into the limelight. The Russians have scored a distinct success by the capture of the Turkish port of Khopa, on the Black Sea, from which the Turkish army in the Caucasus drew part of its supplies.

An official report says that besides the ships which entered the Dardanelles and are bombarding the interior forts, some are throwing shells overland from the Gulf of Saros, so that the Turkish garrisons will be subjected to fire from two sides. The Turks are concentrating strong forces for the defense of Constantinople, and the Balkan states are watching the operations with intense interest. The success or failure of the Allies' attempt to open the straits means much to the Balkan nations.

LONDON, March 3.—(1.15 p.m.)—A despatch to Reuters from Athens says: "The Allied fleet today bombarded and reduced to silence the forts of Dardanelles, Hamidieh and Tehmerlik on the Asiatic side of the Dardanelles. The telegraph station at Besiktas also was demolished."

The bombardment was carried out by nine ships which advanced two miles up the straits."

Mist Obscures Vision

LONDON, March 4.—(1.25 a.m.)—A despatch to the Havas agency from Athens says that a mist prevented the ascertainment of the extent of the damage done by the warships in their bombardment of the inner forts of the Dardanelles yesterday. A destroyer which passed the town of Dardanelles, according to the correspondent, reported that it had been evacuated.

British Admiralty Report

LONDON, March 4.—(11.25 a.m.)—The admiralty late last night issued the following report regarding the bombardment of the Turkish forts by the Anglo-French fleet:

"The operations in the Dardanelles were resumed at 10 o'clock Monday morning, when the British ships Ocean and Albion entered the straits and attacked Fort No. 8 and the batteries at White Cliffs. The fire was returned by the forts and also by howitzers."

"An air reconnaissance made by naval aeroplanes in the evening brought the report that several new gun positions had been prepared by the enemy, but that no guns were swept in them. The aeroplanes also located surface mines."

"During Monday night a force of mine sweepers covered by destroyers, swept within a mile and a half of Cape Kephez, and their work, which was carried out under fire, was reported to have been excellent. The casualties sustained during the day were slight, amounting to only six wounded."

"Four of the French battleships operated off Bulair and bombarded the batteries and communications."

"The operations at the entrance of the straits, already reported, have resulted in the destruction of 19 guns, ranging from six to 11-inch; 11 guns below six inches; four Nordenf and two searchlights. The magazine of forts 6 and 8 also have been demolished."

"A further report received states that on Tuesday the Canopus, Swiftsure and Cornwallis engaged Fort No. 8. A heavy fire was opened on them by Fort No. 9 with field batteries and Fort No. 9 was damaged and ceased firing about 1.15 in the afternoon."

"Seaplane reconnaissance was impossible owing to the weather; the mine sweeping operations were continued throughout the day. The attack progresses."

"The Russian cruiser Askold has joined the allied fleet off the Dardanelles."

Clearview

The concert and debate on Friday turned out to be a great success, and the committee managed very well without the "pikers." The school was crowded, and over thirty dollars was collected at the door, and will be sent to the Belgian Relief Fund. The dialogues were very amusing, especially "Troubles in a Mormo Family," and some people are wondering if Mr. Wilkins is as rich (in wives) as he tries to make out. Both the singing and playing showed the outsiders what talented people live in Clearview, and one person was heard to remark, "When has Clearview got up a concert that wasn't a success." The debating subject was "Which are the most useful in the country, doctors or lawyers?" The judges decided in favor of Mr. Evans and Miss Truitt, who argued as good as any lawyers in favor of doctors.

Rev. Barton will lecture in the school some time this month. Date to be announced later.

For some reason the prayer meeting was not held on Tuesday last, but will be held next Tuesday as usual. Don't forget, when you are able to turn out to a social on Tuesday, there is no reason why you people live in Clearview, and one

GILLETTS' LYE EATS DIRT

Farmers Handling Their Own Stock

The live stock department of the Farmers' Co-operative Elevator Company of Alberta, which was established a little more than a year ago, will do a business this year in excess of $1,000,000, according to the estimate of the official in charge of the department. It ran ahead of the half million mark in the first year of its existence, and last week did a business in hogs alone to the extent of $20,000, or at the rate of $85,000 per month. It is the most profitable branch of the co-operative scheme of the organized farmers of the province.

"The high price of feed is a temptation to the farmers to put their breeding stock on the market," said this official. "I am urging my friends to hold on to their breeding stock, because I believe that the price of pork next fall will break all records."

Just as soon as the European market opens up, the demand will go far in excess of the supply, and the farmer who is in shape to carry over his breeding stock so that he will have pork for sale will get a price that will justify him for his trouble."

SAW HIS MISTAKE

How Scion of Rich Family Discovered That Money Would Not Purchase Everything.

By GEORGE MUNSON.

Though his family and friends had disowned Richard Brewster when he was sentenced to serve five years in the Alabama penitentiary for forgery, he had still enough influence to have his escape made easy for him. At twenty-five, the second son of old Peter Brewster, the millionaire, he suddenly found himself bereft of everything that meant life to him. For three years he clerked in the warden's office, dreaming of the time when he would be free once more. He would obtain money from his part-time old father who had disowned him, in spite of his threats; he knew that he could blackmail him for twenty thousand by threatening to publish certain facts in the old man's early history. For although Peter Brewster was the scion of a rich family in Alabama, once when he was a young man—well, Richard had discovered that slip, which had made the millionaire indignant to his son's weakness until he crowned them with forgery. Peter had never stolen or forged; still, he could be made to yield up twenty thousand, Richard knew, for silence.

After three years the Brewster influence had waned with the change of governors, and Richard was taken out of his easy berth and shipped off to labor in the turpentine camp at Parling. There the horror of his position pressed upon him. He was a young man, when he was a young man—well, Richard had discovered that slip, which had made the millionaire indignant to his son's weakness until he crowned them with forgery. Peter had never stolen or forged; still, he could be made to yield up twenty thousand, Richard knew, for silence.

There the horror of his position pressed upon him. He was a young man, when he was a young man—well, Richard had discovered that slip, which had made the millionaire indignant to his son's weakness until he crowned them with forgery. Peter had never stolen or forged; still, he could be made to yield up twenty thousand, Richard knew, for silence.

"A Convict." "That mile meant hard traveling, when one weighed fifty pounds above his norm, but Richard had made it. Through swamps and over fallen timber, and plunging into rotten timber, he pressed forward, to emerge at length, bleeding and torn, at the head of the little bay. It was late afternoon; a cottage stood on the bank not fifty yards distant; and the boat just showed among the mangroves. Brewster crept cautiously toward it. He pulled it from its place into the shallow water. Then he discovered that, with the chain and ball, he could not enter it. He could not lift his leg from the swampy bottom of the bay; nor, had he done so, could he have climbed in without upsetting the craft.

Under the seat, as he had been advised, he saw the little oblong package containing the money and the key. But he could not reach so far. His finger tips stopped short a full foot; to stretch further meant to upset the little craft. He struggled till the sweat poured down his face. Then, turning, he became aware that a small child was watching him, a girl about five years old, evidently from the cottage.

"Come here," said Brewster hoarsely, and the child obeyed. "Do you see that package under that seat? Could you get it for me?"

The child stood watching him, finger in mouth, half frightened, half interested. It was evident that she had no intention of doing what the stranger man told her. Brewster resolved to try the effect of fear.

"Marjorie! Marjorie!" called a clear voice from the cottage. Brewster in a hoarse, angry whisper. "Climb in there at once and get me that package!"

Terrified, the child began to cry. Brewster lost control of himself and she set up a scream. Then the man's nerves parted and a clear-eyed, intelligent young woman, perhaps Brewster's own age, confronted him. "What are you doing with Marjorie?" she cried. "Do you think we are afraid of tramps here? Off with you, or I'll set the dogs on you!" Then the girl fell on the ball and chain, and she recoiled a step, but still stood facing him, one hand holding Marjorie tightly to her.

"A convict," she said, and only half hid her terror.

"Yes," said the man. "I'll make a clean breast of it. I'm Brewster—Richard Brewster. I see you know who I am. There is a package under that seat with a key that will unlock this padlock, and five hundred dollars. I can't reach it with this chain. Get it for me and I'll divide the money with you."

"We don't help convicts here," answered the girl, watching him steadily. She half turned, still clutching the child.

"I'll give you all," shouted Brewster. "Five hundred dollars! I'll give you my crazy cottage and land—and you too."

She turned on him. "I guess that's where you're wrong," she answered bitterly. "Some folks can't be bought; if they could my folks would be richer than they are. Perhaps you know father, Herman Grace," she added.

"Grace! The head warden!"

"I thought you did. He had taken that five thousand dollars from me, offered him to let you escape, we wouldn't be living in this 'crazy cottage' any more. You see, you can't get that package for me!" he demanded. "No, nor I won't lift a finger against you. Go on your way. I've heard of you and your dealings. You poor creature, what sort of happiness have you found in your life, you who think everybody is for sale?"

"The thought was new to Brewster. 'Why I—haven't had much,' he stammered. 'How long have you to serve?'"

"Nearly two years." "Two years!" she echoed. "So you are willing to purchase two years of liberty by a life of ignominy? You are everywhere, hiding from all, trusting none, always expecting to hear the door of a detective at your heels? You poor fellow!"

He hung his head. "I don't know!" he stammered. "Nobody ever put it to me that way before. I've never met a girl like you. I thought they were all out for the money. Say! he went on rapidly, 'that little daughter of yours ought to be proud of me!'"

"My sister," said the girl, smiling for the first time. "I'm not married—yet."

Brewster took a step forward and stood before her, the ball clanking on its chain behind him. In his eyes was a light that had never shone there before.

"Miss Grace," he said, "if I go back—if I serve my time—if I try to live a decent life afterward, and I have wanted to sometimes, only I never had any encouragement—if I do all these things, will you let me come to you the day I am set free and ask you to help me? Just to let me what to do? So that I can feel that I have a friend, besides money?"

"Yes," she answered impulsively. "Yes. And I shall tell my father what you have told me."

Brewster turned and plunged back through the mangroves toward the convict camp, the ball jangling behind him. (Copyright, 1912, by W. G. Chapman.)

On Style. Idiosyncrasies of character tell even more than variety of subjects in their influence on style. No two persons are cast in the same mold. Clearly, therefore, the dress which is very becoming to one writer or speaker may be very unbecoming to another. Yet, to the end of time, in the domain of this truism, packs of imitators do the steps of genius, as the courtiers of Alexander copied the conqueror's very walk, or the courtiers of George IV. his bulging cravat, or as the under carter apes the slouch and shambling of the waggoner. This peculiar style in which Carlyle clothed his oracular utterances suited him and them, the jerkiness and jottiness of his sentences, setting the words in a jagged line, and the difficulty of unwrapping the mummy from the cerecloth, necessitating the effort of Will, without which the thought cannot be great.

In fact, the style of Carlyle is part of the man and of his temperament. But it was good advice of the dying critic to his friend, "Avoid Carlyles." And what is true of Carlyle and his copyists is true widely. Can any great writer be named who has not had a herd of servile imitators at his heels? Is not the old saying doubly, trebly true in this application, "The style is the man"? Carlyle was the worst!—Gregory Smith, in the Oxford and Cambridge Review.

U.F.A., Edwell Union No. 53

The fortnightly meeting of the Local Union was held on Wednesday evening, February 24th, in the school house, at which there was a very fair attendance of members, among whom there were several ladies. Their attendance was quite in accordance with sentiments expressed at the annual convention, and it is good to see that they take an interest in the matters appertaining to the great farmers' organization, which is now making itself felt in the province and indeed throughout the Dominion.

After several official communications had been dealt with, Mr. T. J. Walton contributed an exceedingly interesting and instructive paper on sheep and sheep-raising. It was listened to with rapt attention, and subsequently gave rise to considerable discussion. All the sheep raisers in the district have come to say on the subject, consequently those who were ignorant of the subject were able to learn quite a lot. This is as it should be, and it is good news for the members to hear that there are several papers of the present series ready for their perusal or otherwise at future meetings.

The members took up the matter of the supply of horses to the remount department, and it was moved by W. E. Pixley, seconded by T. Walton, that this Local Union protests most strongly against the trading advertisements issued by the remount department as to the type of horses required, causing members of farmers to make a long trip to town to no purpose. This gave rise to considerable discussion, and the resolution was passed unanimously, and the Secretary was instructed to forward a copy of same to the Executive of the U.F.A.

After a hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Walton for his valuable paper, the President announced that the next paper would be contributed by Mr. F. Powell, the Secretary, on Wednesday, March 10th, 1915, at 7.30 p.m., in the school house.

Members are urgently requested to attend the next meeting, as several matters of importance to the members will be brought forward, and they are particularly requested to bring their friends (non-members).

F. J. Powell, Secretary.

Getting After the Submarine

London.—Men on British merchant vessels who lose life or limb owing to the action of an enemy warship, submarine or aircraft, are now being entitled to the same scale of benefits as men of similar rank in the Royal Navy. The prompt government award to the captain of the Laertes has stimulated the enthusiasm of the merchant captains, who are resolved to fight submarine raiders at every opportunity. While it is obviously impossible to give details of the British counter schemes, Canadians can rest assured that nothing has been left undone here. Germany's action may, conceivably, considerably shorten the war as it has compelled the British government to consent to steps long demanded by the navy in the way of paralyzing the enemy's supplies, closing their communications and pushing aerial attacks.

PATRIOTISM AND PRODUCTION

"I would urge the farmers of Canada to do their share in preventing the people of Great Britain suffering want or privation."

HON. MARTIN BURRELL, Minister of Agriculture.

The Empire Needs Many Foods

In the past Great Britain has imported immense quantities of these staple foods from Russia, France, Belgium, Germany and Austria-Hungary as shown by the following:—

| Average Imports | Years 1910-1913  |
|-----------------|------------------|
| Wheat.....      | 25,439,000 bush. |
| Oats.....       | 23,686,304 "     |
| Barley.....     | 15,102,208 "     |
| Corn.....       | 7,621,374 "      |
| Peas.....       | 705,000 "        |
| Beans.....      | 395,653 "        |
| Potatoes.....   | 4,721,500 "      |
| Onions.....     | 271,569 "        |
| Meat.....       | 26,600,706 lbs.  |
| Eggs.....       | 121,119,916 doz. |
| Cheese.....     | 91,706,233 lbs.  |

Millions of bushels rather than the millions of acres should be Canada's aim. That there is abundant reason to expect larger returns from the same area is conclusively shown when we compare the present time with the possible production. No. 10 the following table will show the average in 1914 and possible production per acre.

| Average Possible  | 1914   | 1915  |
|-------------------|--------|-------|
| Fall Wheat.....   | 20.43  | 22.   |
| Spring Wheat..... | 14.84  | 33.   |
| Barley.....       | 16.16  | 69.   |
| Oats.....         | 36.30  | 51.   |
| Corn.....         | 20.0   | 20.0. |
| Corn-England..... | 12.    | 19.   |
| Peas.....         | 15.33  | 37.   |

Increase Your Live Stock

Breeding stock are to-day Canada's most valuable asset. The one outstanding feature of the world's farming is that there will soon be a shortage of breeding stock. Europe and the United States, as well as Canada, will pay higher prices for beef, mutton, and bacon in the very near future. Do not sacrifice now. Remember that live stock is the only basis for prosperous agriculture. You are farming, not speculating.

Canadian Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, Canada

BELLADONNA

"During recent years the entire supply of belladonna has come from a very limited territory, a few provinces in Germany and Austria, and a few shires in England. While the war continues and probably for many years to come, this supply will be cut off. The cultivation of belladonna in America is now receiving attention and probably will also lead to the cultivation of other herbs which have heretofore come from Europe exclusively.

"The entire belladonna plant is highly poisonous. Its leaves and roots are largely used in medicine and it is for this purpose that it is cultivated by peasants in the sections mentioned above.

"Both roots and leaves of the plant contain the poisonous alkaloid atropia. Preparations of atropia are used in medicine as anodynes in local and nervous pains and for other purposes. A popular and growing use of belladonna is in the preparation of plasters."

We sell "Rex" Belladonna and Capsicum Plasters. It is a Plaster for Any Pain.

THE BY-LAWS.

A vote of the ratepayers will be taken on Monday next, March 15th, on the by-laws to take over the deficit of the Agricultural Society and to pay by general tax for the boulevard built in Red Deer. We hope ratepayers will keep the date in mind and turn out and vote. The first by-law may well receive the support of the citizens and, should carry. The boulevard by-law is a different proposition, and if it should pass it would cause any amount of trouble. We hope it will be turned down by the ratepayers on Monday next.

DR. CLARK'S CONFIDENCE.

Dr. Michael Clark, of Red Deer, who has largely succeeded in imposing his economic views upon the Opposition, does not like to be reminded of his former stand on the German menace. In denying the emergency indicated by Sir Robert Borden as the basis for his Dresden nought proposal, the member for Red Deer said: "I personally am rather in a position to plume myself on this naval question. The fact of the matter is that this German scare has become so attenuated a thing that it only finds a resting place in such comparatively disordered minds as we have had an example of this afternoon."

Six o'clock interrupted the emphatic deliverance at this point, but after dinner Dr. Clark resumed: "Just as in the middle of the last century, the French scare passed away without there having been a trigger pulled then or since; so, happily for humanity and civilization, the German scare of yesterday is vanishing. I think I shall be able to offer proof from the best possible sources that a generation from now we shall be looking back upon this scare as another of the human follies and upon the historical fact that following it there was not the firing of a shot by the one or the other of these great Christian nations." It is said that Dr. Clark will spend most of the coming Parliamentary recess in compiling his "proofs from the best possible sources."—Toronto News.

LOOK FORWARD.

From the Monetary Times. Spring is coming, the allies are doing well, confidence is firm, sentiment is cheerful, loose money is easy, much money awaits investment, plans for more production are well under way, business is fair, there is a bond market, the general national position is being shaken into its proper places. Hold up your head and look forward.

THE END OF RURAL DISCONTENT.

The Toronto Sun, a leading Ontario farm journal, published at Toronto, with decided Liberal leanings, remarks the other day:

"The manufacturers seem to have done well by their conference with the western farmers. The farmers save something. They are still to have free reapers, mowers, binders, harvesters, traction ditching machines and binder twines. Two millions and a half are to be distributed in Southern Alberta and Saskatchewan, to relieve the distress due to crop failure. The western farmers are also to have, perhaps as a reward for their resolutions diverting attention from the tariff to the single tax and the collection of all revenues from the prairies, hills and snow-capped mountains, a distribution of seven and a half million dollars of seed grain for which applications are pouring in from all three provinces. If, as we assume on general principles of party effort, the distribution is made on the recommendation of patronage committees, we see before the last hope of Laurier in the west. Mr. Burrell is also to continue aggressively his distribution of pure bred animals and assist the larger farm associations. Surely, such benevolence assures the end of rural discontent."

Legislative Chamber, Edmonton

(SPECIAL TO THE NEWS)

(Received too late for last week's issue)

The state of the health of the Sifton-Cross government always is so much a matter of uncertainty that hardly a session of the legislature opens without a fresh sprouting of a crop of rumors dealing with the continued existence of the administration. Perhaps the closest have the government had was when the legislature assembled in the fall of 1911. The air stifled in the new legislative chamber; it seemed surcharged with the tension of the strained feeling between the Siftonites and the Cross followers. I know for a fact that neither side quite knew what was to result until a happy breath delivered the history of Alberta as it has been conducted. The members' private room late the second night after the session had opened. Sifton had to give way so far as to take Cross into the cabinet. Cross had to stay his hand sufficiently not to throttle Sifton, as he could have done.

And now, to the surprise of quite a few, the very same state of affairs existed at the opening of the 1915 legislature a few days ago. I will not go into the details. Some I do not know; but enough are known to more than reveal the situation; but as this is hardly the time to go into it why dilate upon the sordid facts? That sentence reminds one of a thought taken from a police court reporter's account of a murder, or of something one might meet with in one of those up-to-date novels which lay bare the inner secrets and manipulations of that low form of soulgrubbing and politics still to be found in many of the states of the Union and in some of the provinces of the Dominion. In Alberta for instance. You should not be any too ready to take sides, either with Sifton or with Cross. The latter has without a doubt to wear a coat of coloring of which has been dyed a deep and ugly chrome, and possibly with good reason; for "Charlie" Cross certainly has offended against the canons of decent government. But he is only a passing phase. In a few years his memory will be to the people of this province but that of a benign deliverance from the history of Alberta as it has been conducted. Will the people of Alberta then be able to think so lightly of the intrusion into their affairs of Arthur L. Sifton? I think not. What Cross has been able to do is a flea bite to what the Sifton-Mitchell faction is "putting over" this province today. And which it is doing by "putting over" since Arthur L. Sifton gave the first bunch of railway guarantees at $20,000 a mile to J. D. McArthur. Ostensibly to J. D. McArthur. That's the trouble. It's all so ostensibly so, but all so different in point of reality. To be brief though, the point I am trying to get at, however, and the point which I desire you most to bear in mind, is this: What Sifton is doing to Alberta will never be repeated by the people until they last find they have nothing left and the Siftonians have everything. When the name of Cross is dead, buried and forgotten, Alberta will spume at the thought of the name of Sifton. Of course this is only prophetic. Reasons for it must be developed at another time. The News has not the space to spare this week in which to recount all that might be revealed. Such information, like the snow ball being rolled, takes time in the gathering.

But, hang it all, I have not explained how it is that the Sifton and the Cross people are at each others throats again. The apparent reason is a mere straw showing how the wave blows. A couple of years ago Sifton brought J. D. Hunt into the service of the government; he made him lay clerk to the legislature. Soon Mr. Hunt was everything that lay around. Before anyone thought much about it Clark was no longer deputy-attorney general, and Hunt was. To that office he garnered in a few more. Then he seemed to be the only "legislation" in no other attorney-general," as the learned minister of education might have remarked. Mr. Hunt got to be so very much "it" as attorney-general that the real attorney-general had to do something if he were to feel he had any reason for living. Hunt was fired. He resigned. He did something which was much the same as being fired, that rather nicely explained by himself when you read between the lines the official police term. Hunt said he wasn't. Cross said he was. Sifton kept mum, but let it be understood Hunt wasn't. In the words of the war correspondents, there was a stalemate. Hunt said he'd stick anyhow, and mind you Hunt deserves better than to be the unfortunate butt of this row. Cross didn't think Hunt could stay. He was Sifton. Hunt goes," said Cross. "Hunt stays," said Sifton. "He goes," asserted Cross. "No," retorted Sifton, intimating that the other better show his hand. Cross did. "Hunt" muttered Sifton, looking pretty sick. Cross had him beaten with one vote to spare in the legislature. All that is necessary is for the Conservatives to move a resolution upon which the Cross people could hang. "Hunt! Hunt goes then," snarled Sifton, asking, "will that suit you?" And now I'm hanged if I know whether these two leaders of the present provincial government are any more friendly than they were when Cross made Sifton promise in 1911 to take him into the cabinet, and to make "Charlie Mitchell" go sweeping mud in the public works department. What do you think about it?

The question leaves one against as blank a wall as does the speech from the throne. As usual, it is as tame as eating egg without salt. And yet it may not be. You know what I was saying a while back about the state Sifton is getting this province into. Isn't that rather nicely explained by himself when you read between the lines in this excerpt which I will take from the speech from the throne, and upon which I'll leave you to cogitate—

"I am pleased to say that the people of Alberta, as a whole, have shown a serious desire to assume the responsibilities and endure the necessary hardships consequent upon a state of war. While many lines of business are being profitably carried on, more particularly those connected with agriculture and stock raising, there is of necessity a great decline in the amount of public work, municipal, Government and railroad, that depend upon borrowed capital, and during the coming season it will be necessary for the people of Alberta in common with all western provinces to pursue a course of rigid economy and to make such re-arrangements of their business connections as will enable them to take advantage of the prosperity in the lines where prosperity is possible and to exercise their courage and patience in connection with those lines of employment which have been rendered impossible by the present state of affairs."

SALE OF LANDS FOR TAXES

In the Municipality of the City of Red Deer, the Red Deer Public School District Number 104 and the Red Deer Separate School District Number 17, of the Province of Alberta, for arrears of taxes and costs.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that at certain lands in the Municipality of the City of Red Deer, the Red Deer Public School District Number 104 and the Red Deer Separate School District, will be offered for sale for arrears of taxes and costs on Friday, the 14th day of May, A.D. 1915, at the City Hall, Ross Avenue, in the City of Red Deer, at the hour of two o'clock p.m.

A full list of the lands to be offered for sale may be found in the following tables, viz: Wednesdays, March 10th, 17th, 24th and 31st, 1915.

And, unless the arrears of taxes and costs are sooner paid, the undersigned Secretary-Treasurer of the City of Red Deer will proceed to sell the lands referred to for taxes and costs on the day and at the time and place above mentioned.

Joint Meeting of Council and School Board

JOINT MEETING HARMONIOUS; LIVELY COUNCIL MEETING FOLLOWED

A joint meeting of the City Council and the School Board, for the purpose of discussing the financial position, was held in the Council Chamber, Wednesday, March 3rd. The Council were in full strength, as follows: Mayor Carswell, Commissioner Stephenson and Aldermen Botterill, Smith, Coote, Watson, Johns and Snell. The School Board were represented by Chairman W. E. Payne, Secretary Munro, F. S. Simpson and R. L. Gaetz.

In opening Mayor Carswell said the meeting had been called to discuss the financial situation in a friendly manner, and to arrive at some understanding as to the best policy to pursue. There appeared to be a general inclination on the part of the banks to reduce further the rate of interest on the loans to municipalities in the west, instance Moose Jaw, Medicine Hat, Lethbridge, Calgary and Edmonton due to extravagant spending.

Alderman Botterill—Have the banks refused the city's cheque?

The Mayor replied that they had not exactly, but we had asked the bank for ten thousand dollars to carry us over for a short time, and they had refused this until certain information was furnished them, and when this information had been given, a further letter was read from Mr. Rapsey, manager of the bank, stating that the bank could not see its way to make further advances of money at this time until at least further information was given.

Alderman Coote said they had been informed by the Commissioners that one of the difficulties of financing was the school finance. He suggested the Commissioners take up the matter with the School Board and thresh it out. He would like to know where the banks stood on this question.

P. S. Simpson said he would like any misunderstanding cleared up. The finance committee were prepared to answer any questions regarding extravagance.

Alderman Watson said he wished to criticize the expenditure on fuel. He thought $1700, an exorbitant amount. In his opinion it was due to having a wrong heating system, and he gave details of construction and use of coals bearing out his views.

Alderman Snell rose at this point and said the meeting appeared to be different to what he thought it was. He thought the financial question should be dealt with first.

R. L. Gaetz said he would like to take up the subjects as suggested by Alderman Watson. Smith & Gaetz, experience with the different classes of coal for their plant had worked out in favor of Saunders Creek coal. Alderman Watson then went into details as to the qualities of coal, and the difference between the plants, claiming that the coal of the school plant was too close to the boilers to allow for the proper consumption of the coals, consequently the greater percentage went up the chimneys in smoke.

W. E. Payne, chairman of the Board, said the plant had been in use for some years and was probably not the best on the market, but it was considered the best at the time it was put in. There were 540 pupils attending the schools, and the continual opening of doors allowed a lot of cold air to enter, and of course it took more firing to heat the building. The school here had never been closed through cold, but that had happened in other cities. The janitor had been of the opinion that Saunders Creek coal was giving the best results.

Alderman Watson here said that 75 per cent. of the fuel was going to waste owing to defects in the plant, and pointed out that MacGillivray Creek coal had the highest test.

Alderman Botterill at this point said he did not think this the time to go into these details. The main thing was to get down to a point of how we were going to induce the bank to give us money, and that point should be disposed of first.

Mayor Carswell did not see why the points raised could not be discussed as they came along. Charges had been made against the School Board, and this was a good time to clear the matter up.

W. E. Payne said rumors had been circulated that the Board had been extravagant, and went into a detailed matter showing the opposite to be true. It was as well to clear up any misunderstandings now. The closing of the schools was out of the question. Attendance was on the increase, and probably two more teachers would be required at Easter.

The trustees were responsible by law to keep the schools open, and if they resigned, they were still responsible until superseded. The salaries above $70 had all been reduced.

Alderman Johns asked if the estimates were definite.

Chairman Payne said there might be a little variation.

Alderman Watson and Coote effected a matter cleared up that affected them personally. A rumor had been circulated among the teachers that the said Alderman had been the mover of a motion for reducing the teachers' salaries 25 per cent., and they wished to deny the whole thing.

W. E. Payne said that was the first he had heard of it, and that there was nothing to it.

Both Aldermen were satisfied with the explanation.

Alderman Botterill said he noticed banks were shown this, the situation would be improved. The financial question was then adjourned until next meeting.

Alderman Coote said it had been reported to him that there was a difference in the weight of the city scales and howeve.

Commissioner Stephenson said the city scales were being well looked after and carefully tested. Alderman Botterill supported this by stating that there was only a difference of three bushels of oats in five earloads weighed on the city and railway scales.

Alderman Botterill, rising to a point of privilege, got after the press for misquoting him in respect to assessing of outside property.

Mayor Carswell thought it a fair report.

Alderman Botterill then got warm on the boulevard question by stating that there was only a difference of three bushels of oats in five earloads weighed on the city and railway scales.

Alderman Botterill said the motion last year referring it to the ratepayers to give them an opportunity to vote to pay this $3000 out of the general rate was passed unanimously in Council, and Alderman Carswell had then made not the slightest objection. Alderman Botterill claimed he then favored the general tax, instead of the local improvement, while now, as Mayor and in the News, he was opposing payment by general rate.

The Mayor had apparently seen new light since his attention had been directed to the local improvement boulevard by-laws of previous years. Why was not the Council put in possession of this information by the Commissioners?

It was ridiculous to bring in such a by-law as this by-law to pay for boulevards out of the general rate and send it to the people under the circumstances now disclosed. Alderman Botterill did not grudge words in getting after his Worship, who managed to get in a word or two of defence egoism.

The Mayor disclaimed any want of consistency in his attitude re. these boulevards in Council and press. If he had not voted on a resolution, that did not necessarily imply that he was in favor of it. If they had any grievance against The News or its editor, they was a proper way of ventilating it open to every man, but he should not be set on in Council. In his actions as Mayor he held himself subject to their criticism.

Alderman Botterill was proceeding against the editor of The News, when his Worship called him to order. There was no reason why he should be traduced and his business dragged into the Council proceedings simply because he was a newspaper man, and moreover, he was not a member, and he would not permit it. He ruled Alderman Botterill out of order.

Alderman Coote then took up the tale, and said the aldermen had been placed in a queer light before the ratepayers over this boulevard by-law. He had no idea that these boulevards had been passed by previous councils as local improvement by-laws, and he did not know that the ratepayers had been publicly notified without objection of the intention of the Council to constitute them as local improvements.

At this point the Mayor rose to the point of order, and said that the Council should take some of the responsibility for not looking more closely into the matter, but it was surely the duty of the Commissioners, when the Council proposed to reverse an established and complete policy, to acquaint them with what had gone before. The aldermen should have been advised by the Commissioners of the action taken in 1911 and by succeeding councils, and he had earlier knowledge of this local improvement procedure, they would never have voted to send it to the property owners to pay for it out of the general tax.

Mayor, in this matter, he conceived had hidden behind the News.

But, at this point, the Mayor ruled Alderman Coote out of order.

Commissioner Stephenson said he had put the facts before the 1914 Council at the June meeting, which first reversed the local improvement procedure. First of the 1915 Council were then present. As his representations did not avail anything on that occasion, he did not deem it necessary to bring up the matter in the Council's decision this year.

Council adjourned at 11 o'clock.

COUNCIL MEETING.

At the close of the joint meeting, the Council held a meeting to discuss financial matters.

The question of back taxes came under discussion, it being generally agreed that a sliding scale would help out considerably, at least those who had to pay the five per cent. penalty would not do so until the full period had expired.

Alderman Johns, however, felt it was creating a bad precedent in taking off the penalty. If that was done, it would have a big effect on him.

The following motion carried: Moved by Alderman Coote and Botterill, That the Secretary-Treasurer be authorized to receive arrears of taxes for 1914, plus one per cent. per month from January 1st, 1915.

Alderman Coote asked for further details to be brought down in respect to persons owing taxes. He was of the opinion that advertising did not go far enough. A personal letter to the individual would, in his opinion, bring in greater results.

Commissioner Stephenson said he felt that at the previous meeting of Alderman Botterill regarding the bank, and asked that a committee be appointed to go into the matter with the bank, and that Alderman Botterill be placed on that committee.

Alderman Botterill said that the Commissioners had previously stated there would be no difficulty in getting money from the bank, and did not understand the change in opinion.

Mayor Carswell said Alderman Botterill's statement that the Commissioners were holding something back, was not correct, therefore, it did not have a big effect on him. It would be well to have a committee appointed, however, to wait on the bank manager and ascertain the real truth of the matter.

Alderman Coote thought we were lying down too much to the banks, and they should be got after more strenuously.

Alderman Johns thought some unfair remarks had been made regarding the Commissioners, and those who made them should be a coward to satisfy themselves that the Commissioners had done their best.

Alderman Watson was in favor of adding to the tax rate in order to create a fund in four or five years that would solve the difficulty of arrears of taxes, then we should be able to do without the banks, and they would come to us instead of us having to depend on them.

Alderman Snell thought it a waste of time to bother with the local branch, but better to communicate with the head office, also try to get in some arrears of taxes.

Alderman Smith said they had not had fair usage from the bank in regard to certain statements.

Alderman Botterill said there was no doubt a great reduction would have to be made in the year's estimates, and possibly all grants would have to be put off; and if the

ANY DYSPHEPTIC CAN GET WELL

By Taking "Fruit-a-lives"

Says Capt. Swan

Life is very miserable to those who suffer with Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Sour Stomach and Biliousness. This letter from Captain Swan (one of the best known skippers on the Great Lakes) tells how to get quick relief from Stomach Trouble.

PORT BURKHEAD, Ont., May 8th, 1913. "A man has a poor chance of living and enjoying life when he cannot eat. That was what was wrong with me. Loss of appetite and indigestion was brought on by Constipation. I had had trouble with these diseases for years. I lost a great deal of flesh and suffered greatly. For the last couple of years, I have taken 'Fruit-a-lives' and have been so pleased with the results that I have recommended them on many occasions to friends and acquaintances. I am sure that 'Fruit-a-lives' have helped me greatly. By following the diet rules and taking 'Fruit-a-lives' according to directions, any person with Dyspepsia will get benefit."

H. SWAN "Fruit-a-lives" are sold by all dealers at 50c. a box 6 for $2.50, or trial size 25c. sent postpaid on receipt of price by Fruit-a-lives Limited, Ottawa.

Trying to Awaken Canadians

Dr. C. C. James, Agricultural Commissioner for the Dominion Government. He says that Canadian farmers should, as a whole, increase their production from 25 to 50 per cent., but that in many districts the people do not realize the responsibility that the war has thrust upon them to provide foodstuffs for the Empire.

Alderman Botterill was proceeding against the editor of The News, when his Worship called him to order. There was no reason why he should be traduced and his business dragged into the Council proceedings simply because he was a newspaper man, and moreover, he was not a member, and he would not permit it. # GREAT CLEARING SALE

AN ANNOUNCEMENT TO FARMERS AND CITIZENS

This is the last great chance to get lumber at less than the cost of manufacture. The stress of these trying times compels us to raise money, and to do this, we realize that we have to sacrifice our stock and offer the public genuine bargains in all lines of Building Materials. Beginning March 10th and ending April 10th we will place our entire stock of Lumber and all other Building Materials on the market at a lower price than these have been selling wholesale. Remember you will find everything as represented. We have in the neighborhood of five million feet of native lumber in our yard at the present time, perfectly milled by the latest and most modern machinery and are prepared to stand behind the stock you buy and guarantee it to be up to the standard in quality, grade and size. Farmers, if you have buildings to erect, or repairs to make, now is the time to buy your Lumber, for never in the history of the West has Lumber sold at so extraordinarily low price. These prices are for CASH only. If you are not ready to haul your lumber or to have it delivered now, pay us for what you wish to buy at these prices and we will reserve the material for you until you are ready to use it. Remember, we sell everything in the building line including
